Freedom of Expression Weekly Newsletter

(Issue 46/21 - November 26, 2021)

What happened last week?

- Erdoğan described the depreciation of the Turkish lira and the rising inflation as an "economic liberation war". While Erdoğan continues to lead those who earn their living on the front in his "war", economic inequality in the country is growing. Erdoğan once again reiterated that he bases his economic policy on the equation of "worthless Turkish Lira, increasing exports and decreasing current account deficit". Economists say that this policy, which has been tried in the past, will not have positive results with high inflation. Erdoğan also said in his statement that "there will not be early elections"...
- The Crown Prince of the United Arab Emirates met with President Erdoğan. It was stated that important agreements were signed in 9 areas. The United Arab Emirates has allocated $10 billion in funds under the agreements. Sources close to Erdoğan and the pro-government media had previously accused the United Arab Emirates of being the "financial power" behind the July 15 coup attempt. On the other hand, the increase in exchange rates resulted in an increase of more than 1 Turkish Lira in gasoline and diesel fuel; queues formed at gas stations.
- Interior Minister Süleyman Soylu, who was placed in the middle of the politics-mafia relationship network in Turkey by organized crime leader Sedat Peker, did not respond to the questions of Parliament members of the opposition regarding the allegations against him in the 2022 budget negotiations of the Interior Ministry at the Parliamentary Plan and Budget Committee. Soylu targeted the opposition and had quarrels with Parliament members. The budgets of the Interior Ministry and 5 institutions belonging to the ministry, such as the Gendarmerie General Command and the General Directorate of Security, have grown by 300 percent in the last seven years.
- In the 2021 Global Democracy Report of the International Institute for Democracy and Election Support, Turkey was among the countries whose democracy declined the most in the last 10 years, along with Nicaragua, Serbia, Poland and Brazil. In the report, which described these countries as the beginning of the collapse in democracy, Turkey was defined as a hybrid regime. The term "hybrid regime" is used for countries with regular electoral fraud and where fair and free democracy is thwarted. In countries with this type of regime, suppression of opposition, governmental judiciary, harassment and oppression of the press freedom and freedom of expression are common.
- The joint call text for an "End of the pre-trial detention of children", signed by our initiative and 23 other organizations, was published. As of October 31, 2021, there are 1,347 children under arrest in Turkish prisons. The sentences of 566 convicted children are being executed outside the prison with permissions within the COVID-19. Detained children are either held in closed penitentiary institutes for juveniles and youth or in the juvenile wards of closed penitentiary institutions for adults.

- The Turkish Medical Association launched a "White March" from Istanbul to Ankara for personal rights, better working conditions and the right to public health. Turkish Medical Association (TTB) Central Council President Dr Şebnem Korur Fincancı said, "We are marching to protect the white of our apron against the attacks against our profession, our labor and the darkness imposed on us." The march will end with the "White Forum" to be held in Ankara on November 27.
- The latest hearing of the lawsuit filed against police officer Fatih Karaca, who murdered 18-year-old Syrian Ali El Hemdan for allegedly neglecting his "stop" warning, was held in Adana. The prosecutor claimed a life imprisonment sentence against the police. Tugay Bek, the lawyer of the Hemdan family, said that the law enforcement and other public officials attempted to obfuscate the evidence as part of the investigation. Bek reminded that 403 people were killed between 2007 and 2020 on the grounds that they did not comply with the stop warning of the police.
- Women took to the streets in many cities for the November 25, Day for the Elimination of Violence Against Women. Taksim Square was once again surrounded by the police. The police attacked the women, who gathered at Tünel Square, with tear gas and rubber bullets. Women who wanted to march to protest violence against women in Antakya were prevented as well. The women were beaten by the police. Nevertheless, the protest and demonstration ban that has been going on for 5 years in Van could not prevent the march of Van Women's Platform.
